1911年革命后不久, 香港第一所大学成立。推动这所大学建立的是1907年至1912年担任香港总督的卢加德。卢加德在英国殖民史上最广为人知的, 是他推行的非洲间接统治制度——即当地统治者在英国驻港官员的监督下保留权力。卢加德抵达香港仅五个月后, 便萌生了建立一所大学的想法。当时香港唯一的高等学府是成立于1887年的香港医学院。

Example 5. 案例

Getting the money for the new university was no small feat and reveals concerns about radicalism and higher education in Hong Kong, both locally and in Britain.
Hormusjee Mody, a Parsee merchant who was later knighted for his generosity and his service to the British Crown, offered almost eighteen thousand pounds to start the building and a generous endowment.
Already reluctant to contribute to an institution in which they would have no supervisory role, however, many Chinese elites were concerned that students who attended universities abroad often returned to Hong Kong imbued with radical ideas.
The local British business community was even more hesitant, dismissing Lugard's plan to establish "the Oxford and Cambridge of the Far East" as simply another example of "the university fad" that was so strong in Britain and the colonies.
As Lugard wrote to his wife Lady Lugard (a prominent journalist named Flora Shaw), "the money-grabbing traders fear that if we educate the Chinaman he may become a serious rival."17 The Colonial Office called the idea of a university "Sir Frederick's pet lamb," and some officials in London feared that providing purely secular education would promote antiforeignism and radicalism.

为这所新大学筹集资金绝非易事，这也反映出香港本地和英国对激进主义和高等教育的担忧。一位名叫霍姆斯吉·莫迪（Hormusjee Mody）的帕西族商人，因其慷慨解囊和对英国王室的贡献而被授予爵位，他捐赠了近 18000 英镑用于启动建设，并提供了一笔丰厚的捐赠基金。然而，许多华人精英原本就不愿资助一所他们无法参与管理的机构，他们担心在海外求学的学生往往会带着激进思想回到香港。香港本地的英国商界人士则更加犹豫不决，他们认为卢加德建立"远东的牛津剑桥"的计划不过是英国及其殖民地盛行的"大学热潮"的又一

例证。正如卢加德写给妻子卢加德夫人（一位名叫弗洛拉·肖的著名记者）的信中所说："那些唯利是图的商人担心, 如果我们教育华人, 他们可能会成为我们强大的竞争对手。" 17 殖民地事务部称建立大学的想法是"弗雷德里克爵士的宠儿", 伦敦的一些官员担心, 提供纯粹的世俗教育会助长反外主义和激进主义。

Eventually the necessary funds were raised 筹集，募集.
Ng Li Hing, a local Chinese merchant, donated (v.) money for the anatomy 解剖学 building.
A Chinese merchant from the Straits Settlements (定居点，殖民地) 海峡殖民地 contributed (v.)捐献；捐助 to the arts faculty 学院；系.

- 1867 年成为英国的"直属殖民地"。
- 1946 年， 二战结束后，随着日本占领的结束，英国对其在东南亚的附属地进行重组，海峡殖民地被解散。

The Straits Settlements originally consisted of the four individual settlements of Penang, Singapore, Malacca and Dinding. Christmas Island and the Cocos (Keeling) Islands were added in 1886. The island of Labuan, off the coast of Borneo, was also incorporated into the colony with effect from 1 January 1907, becoming a separate settlement within it in 1912. Most of the territories now form part of Malaysia, from which Singapore separated in 1965. The Cocos (Keeling) Islands and Christmas Island were transferred from Singapore to Australian control in 1955 and 1958, respectively. Their administrations were combined in 1996 to form the Australian Indian Ocean Territories.

这些领土的大部分现在都属于马来西亚 ，新加坡于 1965 年脱离马来西亚。
