Nor, with the exception of inflation and restrictions on certain goods, did the war pose a serious economic threat.
The deflection of European trade from Asia helped local Chinese firms.
Chinese entrepreneurs benefited from the departure of approximately one-quarter of the colony's European men for the war front, moving into businesses dominated by Europeans such as banking and shipping.
Older and smaller Chinese industries, such as camphor wood, preserved ginger, rattan, soap, soy sauce, tobacco, and vermilion, continued to develop, but they no longer remained the primary focus for Chinese industrialists.
The most serious problems during the war were not even related to the war: a disastrous fire at the Happy Valley race track in February 1918 left more than six hundred dead and four hundred wounded, and an outbreak of cerebrospinal meningitis in the crowded Chinese tenements later that year killed more than one thousand people.
The war did, however, affect the European community significantly, for all German women and children were repatriated, the men interned until the end of the war. 香港并未直接卷入第一次世界大战的战事, 也从未面临真正的军事威胁。尽管有六万至十万中国居民因担心殖民地可能遭到攻击而暂时迁往

广东避难。除了通货膨胀和某些商品的管制外, 战争并未对香港的经济构成严重威胁。欧洲贸易从亚洲转移, 反而有利于香港本地华人企业的发展。约四分之一的香港欧洲男性奔赴前线, 华人企业家从中受益, 纷纷进入此前由欧洲人主导的行业, 例如银行业和航运业。樟木、姜片、藤条、肥皂、酱油、烟草和朱砂等传统规模较小的中国产业仍在发展, 但已不再是华人实业家的主要关注点。战争期间最严重的问题甚至与战争本身无关：1918年2月, 跑马地赛马场发生灾难性火灾, 造成六百多人死亡, 四百多人受伤；同年晚些时候, 拥挤的华人公寓爆发脑脊髓膜炎, 导致一千多人死亡。然而, 战争确实对欧洲社会产生了重大影响, 所有德国妇女儿童都被遣返回国, 而男性则被拘禁至战争结束。

Like the rest of the empire, Hong Kong played a role in the British war effort 战争努力.

Almost 25 percent of British males volunteered 自愿参加；主动报名 for war service, and a large number of Chinese workers served in the Chinese Labour Corps 劳工团 in France.
